ARMS Celebrates 35 Years of Protecting Business Records

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

September 6, 2018

(De Pere, Wis.) – When ARMS (Automated Records Management Systems) opened its doors 35 years ago, records management was a chore, not necessarily a priority for most businesses. For many companies, there were boxes stacked in the basement or file cabinets packed into a backroom.

Much has changed and ARMS has been a leader in helping businesses manage and protect the valuable information and records that they rely on.

“Thirty-five years in business is a significant milestone, particularly with the ongoing changes in technology and records management,” said ARMS president Eric Haas. “We are continually upgrading our technology, training and service offerings to meet information management needs of our customers.”

ARMS was founded in Green Bay in 1983 by Michael Liebman. The company moved to the De Pere Industrial Park in 1996 and was purchased by Haas in 2005. Under his leadership, ARMS has become an industry leader in records and information technology services, including traditional document storage, certified information destruction, data protection and media vaulting, document scanning services and automated workflow solutions. ARMS may be best known for its document destruction services, becoming the largest independent shredding provider in Northeast Wisconsin.

“Our operations have grown to include 75,000 square feet of storage space for everything from papers files to computer hard drives and other media storage,” Haas added. “Our facilities are monitored around the clock, with security and fire protection as our top priorities.”

With 31 full-time and part-time employees, ARMS is the largest full-service records management center in the region.
