Symptom Navigator now available on prevea.com

Free resource for parents to differentiate between allergies, cold, flu and COVID-19 in children

Green Bay – As the cold and flu season approaches in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, and symptoms of all these illnesses can be similar, many parents may feel uncertain about what to do if their child becomes sick.

Prevea Health now offers the Symptom Navigator, a free resource available now on prevea.com to help parents differentiate between allergy, cold, flu and COVID-19 symptoms, and offer guidance for what to do in each situation. The Symptom Navigator also offers guidance on COVID-19 testing and when to seek emergency medical attention.

“The Symptom Navigator does not replace a medical diagnosis, and parents should always feel comfortable consulting with their child’s doctor if they are uncertain,” said Dr. Thomas Huffer, Prevea Health pediatrician and Executive Medical Director at HSHS St. Vincent Children’s Hospital in Green Bay. “However, this can be a great tool for families to keep close at hand for when they simply need a place to start.”

The Symptom Navigator is also available for download so families can print and keep nearby for reference, should it be needed. To view and download the Symptom Navigator, visit: prevea.com/SymptomNavigator
